Argentine Farms. The dairy industry in Argentina has shown constant and remarkably rapid growth in recent years. In 1910 the production of butter was 16,817,000 pounds, and of cheese 6,045,000 pounds. By 1921 butter production had increased o 72,294,000 pounds and cheese production to 52,265,000 pounds. Most of the increase has occurred since 1917. This expansion of the Argentine dairy industry is making available on the English markets large quantities of Argentine butter in competition with that from other exporting countries. It is also placing large quantities of cheese on American markets. The report of

D. S. Bullock, agricultural commissioner of the United States Department of Agriculture, of a recent visit to "La aporita," one of the leading dairy farms and cheese factories in Argentina, will be of interest to American dairy-

"La Taporita" is located at-El Trebol arm, or "Estancia," contains about 37,000 acres made up of a number of separated farms. Part of the land is divided into "Tambos," or dairies, of about 370 acres each. On each "Tambo" here are 75 to 130 cows. On the entire farm there are about 15,000 head of cattle and 2,000 hogs.

The factory makes butter and casein and an Italian cheese of the "Grana" type, being the largest factory in Argenina and perbaps in the world producing this type of cheese. Milk is received daily from about 50 patrons, but the larger part of the supply comes from "La Taporita." The general plan is to contribute milk to the factory from the cows on the farm, grow all calves, sellsteers, and use up all by-products to

The factory makes about 25 cheese day. A yield of 7 per cent of the milk obtained. Normally the fat content of the cheese is from 38 per cent to 44 er cent. The skimmed whey is used or feeding hogs. The cheese after being pressed is salted first with coarse sait and afterwards placed in vats of brine, where it remains from 12 to 14 days. On removal from the brine each heese is marked with date of manufacture and put in an underground curing perature of 14 to 15 degrees Centigrade, and held seventeen months. No attent on is paid to humidity. Every three or four days each cheese is thoroughly brushed with a stiff brush. Five or even months after making, the cheese s painted with lampblack, which gives he characteristic black color of this type of cheese. There were in the cellars 20,000 cheese, weighing about 55

The United States, Italy, and some other countries are the principal foreign markets for the cheese. Before the war Italy exported to the United States an average of more than 20,000,000 pounds of cheese annually. Shipment then fell off until in 1920 less than 1,000,000 fore the war but since 1919 has received an average of over 7,000,000 pounds an 'nually from this source. Thus, imports Dickie's rescue, Doris and Jack knelt of cheese from Argentina have in recent side by side at the little white crib. By MARION A. CHILSON

It was dusk when Doris Royace dropped her book into her lap and gazed steadfastly across the water Her thoughts went back to the day when she, with little Dick, had left home in bitter anger and had taker refuge here, in answer to Cousir Beth's invitation to spend a few weeks with her at her cottage on Lake Fairview. The quarrel had been over trifling matter, but of the whole episode one utterance stood out clearly the answer her husband had given to her hysterical statement that he no longer loved her.

"Love, real love, is gained only b sacrifice," were the words that repeat ed themselves over and over in the girl's troubled brain and puzzled her strangely. Another thing troubled Doris. Little Dick had always been his father's con

Often something within her whispered for the boy's sake, if none other, to forgive and forget. But in the end her pride always conquered. Although the days at Fairview were full of young people, gayety and fun, they passed slowly for Doris. Something was lacking, and she, knowing where this something was and that her happiness depended upon it, could not reach out and grasp it, although it lay just beyond her reach.

"Not any more than I've wanted you, my little girl," he whispered, as he kissed her quivering lips. It-was nearly morning when, at last Dickie lay in his little bed, while the doctor said one word, "pneumonia,"

It was during these hours, while Dickle slept, that Jack Royace found a minute to explain. Finding life at home a torture without his wife and child, he had hired a cottage and, with a friend, had gone there for their vacation without the least knowledge of his wife's whereabouts. Reverence for Name of Mary. The Irish showed their reverence for the name of Mary by having two different words for it: one of which they used in referring to the Blessed Virgin, the other when any other woman was the bearer of it. Maol-Mhuire, or the servant Mary, was, however, a name frequently given to children in ancient Ireland. In its Anglicized form it is scarcely recognizable, the Ave Maria notes. Such names as Meyler, Miles, Murray and Gilmore are supposed to have been originally either Maol-Mhuire, the servant of Mary, or MacGuolla-Mhuire, the son of the servant of Marv. Like the Hebrews, Greeks and other antique races, the ancient Irish had nothing to correspond to the modern surname. It was not till the Eleventh century that surnames began to be used in all parts of Ireland. . When it is transformed into a family name Maol-Mhuire, the servant of Mary, be-

The bird has taken on the habits of the woodpecker, and the stou crow-like bill of the cock-bird is admir ably adapted to tap trees, and if they sound hollow, to dig down to the bur row of the insect within. But it lacks the horny-pointed t of the tongue, which in the true wood pecker is provided with recurved hairs thus enabling that bird to pierce the grub and draw it out. In the hurs the bill of the hen-bird has become much elongated and slightly curved. and when the cock has dug down to the burrow, the hen inserts her long bill and draws out the grub, which they then divide between them.

Here and There.

There was a time when a human be he could see. When he went star-gazing he supposed he saw all there were; but by and by Mentius or Galileo or somebody invented a star-detector, which would bring out a point of light where the naked eye saw only a blue field. People have thought of the telescope as the last thing for the discovery of stars: but within a few weeks something new in this line has been invented by scientists in the bureau of standards at Washington, which will cause that instrument to take a back seat. Within recent years it has become known that if different kinds of metal were placed in contact with each other and heat applied a tiny electric current would be set in motion between them. This knowledge has been utilized. Two small disks are heam striking the mirror contains some So delicate is it that it will demonstrate his death for some time. CHANCE FOR MODERN ARTIST Rent Should Never Be Darned, Say limost Any Painter Would Make Hit by the Depiction of Flock of Glyptodons.

Artists have painted every kind of picture except one. They have always glyptodons. We are at one with the artists in their admiration of the lights er, never under any circumstances, be and shadows of a westering sun on the backs of sheep making their way homeward along a wooded road. Nothing, perhaps, so much breathes the atmosphere of bucolic peace.

But let us fancy for a moment, the effect of sunlight on the backs of a coterie of glyptodons. These were prehistoric animals with a bony back like our tortoises, though they were monsters in size. In any light, they must have made a glittering company, and in any gallery an oil painting of them would create a greater sensation than all the sheep pictures collected there Visitors would pass up the sheep a once for the glyptodons.

Mrs. Morgan laughed as she drew the candlewicking through what would one day, she fondly hoped, be a bedspread. Oh, there are lots of things you can send, as you'll find out when you've had as many boys away at school as I have. Of course it does depend on how far away they are. Almost any sort of cake r cookies will keep twenty-four hours, and if they are that close, you can even send baked chicken, potato chips, or a

Are There Three or Four Teaspoonfuls in One Tablespoonful?

Your interesting question is one that as puzzled many teachers and students of Domestic Science. The true, standard easpoonful equals sixty drops, liquid, or sixty grains dry measure, apothecary's weight. The sixty drops or grains make one apothecary's dram, and four drams make one standard tablespoonful, which equals one-half ounce, either apothe-cary's or avoirdupois. Therefore, cor-rectly, four teaspoonfuls equal one table-spoonful, and the old silver teaspoons of our great-great-grandmothers measure this quantity very accurately. But our present-day teaspoons have grown bigger, have become impatient of restriction to the prescribed sixty drops. Three of some of them will now fill a tablespoonful, and there seems to be no definite tandard for their size as there used to
